

Alameda County Resource Conservation District

formally invites you to a

'Day in the District'

Join us to learn more about the wide scope of projects, programs, and services that the Alameda County Resource Conservation District (ACRCD) has to offer. Hear from our staff members, the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS), collaborators, and clients on the projects that make the ACRCD unique, such as wildlife friendly stock pond restoration and permitting, climate change resilience on working landscapes, rangeland management and monitoring, riparian restoration, and initiating the development of transportation wildlife corridors in the East Bay.

Continental breakfast & lunch will be provided, courtesy of the ACRCD.
